Crusade of the American Theosophists in Far Away Lands-A Week's Events in England.

(Copyright, 1896, by the Associated Press.) LONDON, Oct. 17 .- The past week has been cold and stormy, seriously interfering with outdoor exercise and amusement. The Prince and Princess of Wales, with the Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark, their daughter and son-in-law, were in town towards the end of the week, but most of the fashionables remained in the

The band of eight American theosophists who started out to make a crusade extending over the world are just finishing the continent, and will next be heard from at the pyramids in ancient Egypt, which they will explore. According to a report received by theosophists of this city, the Americans have met with marked success. The society in Europe has never been as strong as in America, and in many of the large cities no organization existed among the Ann. few theosophists who dwelt there. The crusaders report that they have not visited a single city without making enough converts to organize a branch, and that where there were branches already existing the membership has doubled and trebled. Mrs. Tingley, the leader of the crusaders, is reported by her friends to be a second Blavatsky, and it is said that there is no end to the remarkable things constantly occurring. She is credited with knowing all about every town in advance, without ever having been there, and of being able to prophesy how many converts will be made at each stop and of being able even to describe their personal appearance. The theosophists in Holland and study music. were very anxious that their country should be represented by a stone in the cornerstone of the Occult College, soon to be built in America. This cornerstone is to be made up of stones from various countries, to be fitted piecemeal, and it is necessary that the component parts be of a certain shape and hardness. To find a stone of any kind in Hohand is like finding a four-leaved clover, but Mrs. Tingley, it is said, hired a conveyance and drove some ten miles out of Amsterdam straight to a spot where a single stone was found. It answered every requirement, and will shortly be shipped to America. On the whole, the crusaders have no reason to complain of their reception in Europe. They have succeeded in arousing a considerable interest in theosophy, and are frequently the guests of nobility.

The weekly record of deaths from diseases of the respiratory systems has gone up from 118 for the second week of September to 218 for the second week of October, and the death rate for the same period has gone up from 148 to 162.

The Earl of Winchelsea has started in business as a butter man and general provision merchant in the vicinity of Covent Garden under the auspices of the National Agricultural Union. He will attempt to supply British tables with the help of the British farmer against foreign competition.

The contest of the students of Glasgow for the selection of a lord director of St. Andrew's is producing the liveliest kind of a political fight. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and Mr. Augustine Eirrell, Liberal member of Parliament for the west division of Fife and author of "Obiter Dicta," "Charlotte Bronte," "Res Judicata," etc., are candidates. Mr. Chamberlaid has been hotly attacked as a candidate conspicuous in the absence of all claims literary or academic hitherto required of a lord director.

A requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the late John W. Mackay, jr., was celebrated to-day in St. Joseph's Church, Paris. The famous Shepherds' Hotel at Cairo has been sold to a hotel syndicate having a number of hotels in the Orient. George Alexander will open his winter season next Tuesday, resuming the run of "The Prisoner of Zenda." New plays by Mr. Pinero and Mr. Carlton will follow. In November Mr. Alexander will begin a series of afternoon performances of classic plays. He has gathered about him a company that for strength and talent is not usual in London in these days of syndicate theaters. Among those already announced are W. H. Vernon, H. H. Vincent, Allen Ayresworth, Henry Loraine George P. Hautry, James Fernandez, H. V. Esmond, Henry B. Irving and Fred Terry. The ladies include Julia Neilson, Fay Davis, Ellis Jeffreys, Mabel Hackney and Dorothea Baird.

Edward Terry reopened his own theater on Wednesday with "Love in Idleness," the new three-act comedy by Louis N. Parker and E. J. Goodman.

Two new theaters are to be built at Dept-Two new theaters are to be built at Dept-ford, one by Mr. Mulholland, who now owns the Metropole at Camberwell, and the other by Cissy Grahame. This last will accom-modate an audience of 3,000 and will be called the Broadway. The largest quantity of champagne ever auctioned off here, was sold on Wednesday last. It consisted of 2,000 dozen, and, according to the advertisements, was sold "by order of an eminent firm of bankers in New York," having been shipped back here from that city after having been in warehouse since early in 1894. The sale attracted buyers from all parts of the kingdom and low prices prevailed, the average being 35s ($8.75) per dozen. Shaenhouse, formerly the residence of the late Comte De Paris, has been rented by what promises to be the smartest bicycle club in England. The house and grounds are magnificent, and among the long list of names of the aristocratic patrons of the club are the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and Sir Charles and Lady Woiseley, nee Murphy, of California. The honorary secretary of the new organization is D. E. Huddleston, of Rawlstone Hall, Cambridge.

Mr. John Hays Hammond, the American engineer who was among the members of the Johannesburg reform committee sentenced to death, and, subsequently, upon the payment of heavy fines, released, has been obliged to postpone his visit to the United States until after the meeting of his company, the De Beers Mines, which will take place in the middle of Novem-ber. He left England yesterday with his wife for a trip on the wife for a trip on the continent.

The license committee of the London County Council considered the music halls on Wednesday last. The Vigilant Society opposed the granting of a license to the Palace Music Hall on the ground that some of the "living pictures" were immoral. But the committee granted the house a full license and expressed regret at the fact that the Vigilants had made the suggestion referred to, which the committee considered to be utterly unfound-ed. This is the first time the place has been granted a full license and was a dis-tinct rebuff for the Vigilants. Licenses were also granted to the Empire Theater and to the Alhambra, although both were opposed by the Vigilants.

PRESIDENTIAL YEAR FORAGERS. How Garfield's Neighbors Tried to Save His Apples in 1880.

New York Sun. "The experience of the good citizens of Canton, O., and of Major McKiniey in this campaign remind me very much of a simi-lar experience in the little village of Mentor in 1880, when General Garfield was the Republican candidate for the presidency." said a lady after reading in the Sun of yes-terday the story of the daily pilgrimages to the home of Major McKinley. "I was a near neighbor of the Garfields the year the General ran for President, and I saw all the demonstrations attendant on the visits of delegations to their home and all the devastation wrought by the bands of relic hunters of which the delegations were nostly composed. The two railreads which pass through Mentor cut the Garfield farm Temporary stations were built on the farm for the accommodation of pilgrims. Day after day the train would drop off hundreds and frequently thousands of curious persons who were bound to see the candidate.

cornfield. First to go was the sweet corn, which the General had hoped to have for table use. Then followed the common field variety as it matured. Sticks and stones were carried away, and pieces of the fences and buildings even were taken. One of the most popular relies with visiters was an apple from the Garfield orchard. Apples were very plentiful that year, and General Garfield had an orchard of trees well laden with fruit. Every apple he had was carried off by his visitors, and I venture to say that there are in the land, kept as precious mementos of that campaign, thousands upon thousands of dried and withered apples stuck full of cloves to preserve them. The owners of these relies do not know that most of them did not grow on the Garfield piace. The neighbors grow on the Garfield place. The neighbors of the General had to come to his rescue from the invading army of petty thieves, and they found a way to help him when they learned that the visitors had turned their attention to the orchard. Every night the neighbors would drive around to the General's orchard and dump wagon load on wagen lord of apples bereath his trees. It did not seem to matter to the relic hunters that there was a dozen different va-rieties of apples under one tree and that none of them was the sort the tree produced. They grabbed at the chance to get an apple and take it away as a reminder of the visit. By 'salting' the Garfield place with relics the General's neighbors and friends think they prevented his house from being carried away piecemeal."

Mr. Hansen has now in his repertoire 309 pieces for the pipe organ, 1,500 companiments for church use, five hundred accompaniments more appropriate for concert use and fifty compositions for the plane. To this he is constantly adding. It is probable that there is no musician in the State that has this many compositions at his command to play. Mr. Hansen knows these without any music, as he is totally blind. The Visits of Peter the Great and Alexander I and II.

When Peter I came to Paris in 1716 he had been the sole ruler of Russia for about twenty years. He was already surnamed "The Great," for he was known to have in-troduced some features of high civilization in a country which was centuries behind Western Europe, to have brid the founda-tions of St. Petersburg, to have built a navy, to have organized an army on the havy, to have organized an army on the latest models, and to have beaten at Poltava Charles XII of Sweden, one of the greatest generals of the day. But in spite of the genius which he undoubtedly possessed, and of the almost pathetic dilisessed, and of the almost pathetic dilisessed with which he strove to imitate the usages of the West, Peter was still, in his bushes and many member of the grounds of a country palace of the Sweet Waters, in that part of which flows by the grounds of a country palace of the usages of the West, Peter was still, in his bushes and many member of the grounds of a country palace of the strove to imitate the usages of the West, Peter was still, in his bushes and many member of the grounds of a country palace of the strove to imitate the usages of the West, Peter was still, in his bushes and many member of the world, a beautiful collection, so, of the world, a beautiful collection and the care the solution of the world, a beautiful collection of the state nabits and manners, only a half reclaimed barbarian, and he was accompanied by his second wife, the coarse Livonian peasant girl, who is known to history as Catherine I. The chronicles of the time recount the sensation produced at the court of the Regent Orleans by the astounding lack of reinement, and even of personal cleanliness evinced by this illustrious Czar: indeed, some of the incidents recorded recall the stories told in our own time regarding the behavior of the Shah and his suite in Buck-ingham Palace. Every night would the great Muscovite and his spouse get drunk together, and every morning they would be found sleeping off their potations on the floor, which they regarded with less suspicion than the bed. In the streets they were chased and beset by the eager-eyed Parisians as if they had been wild animals and it entered not the head of the wildest dreamer to imagine that a successor of that royal boor would one day be acclaimed with rapture as the savior and champion of Alexander I, with the allied armies, enared Paris in the spring of 1814, just before the first abdication of Napoleon, and again, the next year, after Waterloo. welcome visitant.

It was in 1867 that Alexander II, the grandfather of the present Czar, crossed Europe to witness the great exposition of that year, in which the prestige of the second empire seemed to culminate, so far as superficial splendor wont. In the career of the illustrious sight-seer there had been at least one incident which should have led the emotional Parisians to view him with admiration and esteem. Only a few years had passed since, by a stroke of the pen, the Russian Emperor had emancipated over twenty million of serfs, and had generously endowed them with the lands which they had previously tilled for others; a reform which, as regards the unselfishness of the motives prompting it and the colossal scope of its beneficence, has never been equaled on the earth. Almost simultaneously, howon the earth. Almost simultaneously, how-ever, with the memorable deliverance of the Russian peasantry from servitude, had broken out the last Polish insurrection, which, as men now living can recall, was literally drowned in blood. The hearts of many Frenchmen had been wrung by the fate of those combatants for liberty, and the anxious efforts of Napoleon III to shield his friend from annoyance could not altogether repress the utterance of represenaltogether repress the utterance of reproach and imprecation, or prevent a young law student from shouting "Vive la Pologne, Sire!" in the startled ear of the imperial

CELEBRITIES AT A PLAY.

People Who Were Seen at Irving's Production of "Cymbeline." London Letter in New York Mail and Ex-

In the box furthest from the stage on the right hand side sat Mr. and Mrs. Barney Barnato and several plutocratic Australian friends. The wife of the financier is dark, plump and rather pretty, after the round-faced, black-eyed type. She wore a dreadfully ugly gown of old rose satin and velvet, with huge diamond ornaments (all the constellations of beaven as well as the constellations of heaven as well as the blazing sun and crescent moon) disposed across her ample corsage. Two long hori-Zontal bars of diamonds fanced in her black hair on either side, while bracelets galore jingled and glittered upon her arms. Mr. Barnato sat beside her with a shirt front of great amplitude adorned with a single dlamond protruding from a not too well cut evening coat. Next to him sat a lady who was also pleasing, but even more plump than Mrs. Barnato. I don't know who she was, but her diamonds and her yellow satin toilet bespoke the wealth of Australia. Next to the Barnato box was that great legal luminary, Sir George Lewis, with his wife and daughters. They were all dressed very simply, and looked quite insignificant beside the Barnato magnificence. In the box on the pit tier was Lady Granby, future Duchess of Rutland. She is a fear-fully delicate-looking woman, with her hair arranged in a frizz all over her head, and with a curious, uplifted, protesting expression of the eyebrows that gives her rather a peevish look. She was dressed in a sadcolored gray gown, with not a jewel or a flower to relieve its neutrality. In the first loge on the second tier was Sir Edward Lawson and his family. Sir Edward is a Tadema before in the flesh, and I can assure you he gave me quite a shock. He is an enormously stout and very short man, who wears (necessarily because of his huge bulk) the most extraordinary clothes. His face is as monstrous as his body, with large, heavy features and old-fashioned "mutton-chop" whiskers. His hair is quite fashion over his rather low f cenesd. His eyes are beautiful, sunk as they are in the swelling flesh, but they are alert and blue, of the brightest and purest. As I looked at him I thought of those exquisite, tender color poems of his with the very heart of life and beauty laid bare upon them-and I wondered. Mrs. Tadema is a nice looking little old lady of the most ordinary type, with pretty gray hair and almost fearsome costume. It consisted of a black satin skirt and a high-necked tea tacket of green satin embroidered with red roses. Miss Tadema is very picturesque in appearance, dark almost to swarthiness and with wonderful black eyes. She was dressed entire-

In the front row of the stalls was Miss Braddon (Mrs. Maxwell), beloved of our youth. The venerable authoress of "Lady Audley's Secret' was in a black slik gown trimmed sparingly with jet and cut in a round decolletage, while she wore a widow's cap of monumental size, from which flowed long white "weepers" down her dear old bare back. The union of respectable widowhood with frivolous festivity was decidedly funny. Near to her sat Sir John and Lady Monckton. She is a well-known and very talented actress, while her husband is clerk of the city of London, a very great personage indeed.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Barrie were not far off, he looking fearfully frail as usual, and she exceedingly pretty. The wife of the celebrated Scotch novelist and playwright was, before her marriage, Mary Ansel and quite a promising esta-Ansel, and quite a promising actress, was while she was playing with Toole Barrie's first comedy, "Walker, London," that he fell in love with her, She is "ather fair, and on Tueslay night had her abundant hair bound by a fillet of cherry-2010; 2d satin, while touches of cerise velvet bright-ened her charming gown of white satin. Miss Marion Cerry, Ellea Terry's young-er sister, looked delightful in black satin and lace, her lovely auburn hair adorned with a diamond crescent. Alisa Craig, the daughter of the heroine of the evening (Eilen Terry), looked a brilliant patch of color in an exquisite frock of cherry-colored satin with a folded fichu of gauze of the same shade crossed in front beneath a broad belt also of cerise. I vivid scarlet and a deep berthe of lace falling over her shoulders.

And as I have gone to the Lyceum to see a play, why undoubtedly "the play's the thing."

When a Lady Appears Every Chivalrous Gentleman Turns His Back.

On the Bosphorus their caiques are a great resource to the Turkish ladies, but in Pera those of the upper classes can only go out in closed carriages to the Sweet Waters, occasionally accompanied by their husbands on horseback. But they may husbands and sons cannot speak to them while they pass, and no one would venture to say a word to his own wife or mother when the carriage pulls up-the police would at once interfere. Two or three closed carriages of the imperial harem were passing along the road in the gardens on the other side of the river, the blinds so far drawn down that it was impossible to see if anyone was inside, and yet all along our side we saw Turks, whether officers or civilians, going through the same absurd ceremony, and only when the carriages were out of sight did they return to their coffee. Formerly a man never saw the face of his in-tended until after the marriage ceremony, when they withdrew into a room and the veil was lifted for the first time. Now it is generally contrived that the bridegroomelect shall see his future wife for a mo-ment unveiled.
